My River-Like Journey Through Landscape Design

My professional journey has been similar to the course of a river. Like a river, my path has been fed by many sources. Knowing I want to utilize my professional and technical skills to satisfy clients, colleagues, and employers, I've ebbed and flowed around obstacles such as the ongoing recession. Changing course often as landscape design has remained rough waters my love of the profession remains steady like the current of a river. I've learned to look downstream and be ready for the bumps ahead developing strategies to avoid the rocks in the path. I've expanded my skill set to add value of marketing skills which include graphic design and web management. The sources of experience that have fed my journey include the tributaries of: landscape architecture, home design, company branding, project management, client relations, cost estimating, budgeting, scheduling, job tracking, client and sub-contractor relations, marketing, web design, e-newsletters, CAD drafting, web analytics, sales, and entrepreneurial endeavours. Each experience along my professional voyage has added to my skill set and my desire to succeed in landscape design. In every role I've served a few traits persist: my desire to please, my ability to learn and evolve, and my ability to meet challenges.
